HANGING WINDOW GARDEN. A Simple Affair Tent Can Be Constructed for a Few Cents.

Many people are so situated that their gardens, if they have any, must be on a platform on the outside of some sunny window. Such banging gardens are capable of affording a great deal of enjoyment. Many, however, are deterred from enjoying such miniature garden from the fact that the ordinary frame work that is used for the perpose is too expensive to construct, and is applied much too permanently to make it applicable to a rented house, where many flower lovers are to be found. The Illustration shows how a simple affair can be constructed, and how easily and simply it may be attached and detached from the outside of a window. It is a shallow box, with the inner side left off, the outside being as elaborate or as simple as one may elect. The inner edge of the box is attached to the window frame by hooks and hook eyes, while the chains on either side end in rings that are supported by hooks at the top. Beautiful flowers, and not a few of them, are capable of being grown in such a banging garden.-American Garden.

What Goes with What.
